The purpose of this book is...."is to introduce the students of landscape design (and the interested layman) to the fundamentals of landscape art - the distillation of the lifetime's experience of a thoughtful practitioner....Let the student absorb himself/herself in these skillfully chosen pictures, symbols only they may be of reality. The benefit will be at least three-fold: an enhanced perception of the natural world unknowingly dulled by the ethos of modern life; a fertilisation of the imagination beyond all measure; and above all confirmation that within the artist, landscape architect or whom you will, lies the power to translate the beauty 'that is in the eye of the beholder' into a far grander concept of that which lies, or could lie, in his mind" (Sir Geoffrey Jellicoe in Landscape Design).

This new volume to the Helm library was written to update the British Ornithologists' Union's last full checklist, published under the same title in 1971. Since then there have been remarkable changes in both distribution and abundance of the region's birds. Some species have become extinct as breeding birds, whereas others have colonised and even become quite common; many of our most familiar have suffered critical declines with changes in land use and climate. Many birds have appeared as vagrants, and many previous vagrants now occur much more frequently. There has also been a major revolution in bird taxonomy. This book summarises all these changes. A must for the serious ornithologist.

Tropical fish present some of the best examples of how new species evolve and how complex ecological communities are maintained. Their study has generated important new ideas on the roles of ecology and behaviour in the evolution of species and communities.
